Significance of the Seminar:-

In this age of knowledge revolution, there is a flood of information and knowledge creation. It is the need of the hour to recognize, reap benefits and protect the intellectual creation. Intellectual property is a category of property that includes intangible creations of the human intellect. They include copyrights, patents, trademarks and trade secrets. The main purpose of intellectual property law is to encourage the creation of a wide variety of intellectual goods. The law gives people rights and protection to the information and intellectual goods they create. This gives economic incentive to the people for their creation, which in turn stimulate innovation and contribute to the technological progress of the countries.
