Significance of the Seminar

Research is the creation of new knowledge or the use of existing knowledge in a new and creative way so as to generate new concepts, methodologies and understandings. This could include synthesis and analysis of previous research to the extent that it leads to new and creative outcomes.

While English Studies as an academic discipline is roughly a century old within the western academia, research methodology in literary research is a recent phenomenon. Research methods in ELT as a branch of applied linguistics are objective and scientific as they are borrowed from social sciences. Research methods in English Studies can produce paradigm-shifting results. The failure to employ them causes textual interpretations either repetitive or subjective.

This national seminar will introduce the well defined research methods in this area. There is a need to nurture research culture and skills that must be explicitly and compulsorily incorporated into research programmes. Training in research skills and techniques is a key element in the development of a research student.
